Pastoral Letter by Deacon Mark Purdome

"When we call for justice, on the streets, in our homes, schools and workplaces, or from the pulpit, what do we mean?"

The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends toward justice.

Our hearts are heavy and our nerves frayed by what we have seen in our country in the last weeks. The killing of George Floyd was just the latest spark in our country's long history of dealing with racism. At moments like this, it is the responsibility of all of us to acknowledge that racism isn't a thing of the past, and it hasn't been eliminated from the fabric of our society. It is real, it is painful, and it is wrong. As Pope Francis said on Tuesday, "My friends, we cannot tolerate or turn a blind eye to racism and exclusion in any form..."

The quote at the top of this article has been used by everyone from pastors to presidents. It is succinct, has a great rhetorical punch, and expresses something integral to our faith: In the end, God's perfect justice will prevail. But justice in society isn't something that just magically happens. We cannot just sit back and wait. We must act. The leaders of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops put it like this: "As members of the Church, we must stand for the more difficult right and just actions instead of the easy wrongs of indifference."

Yes, action is difficult, and may force us to face some uncomfortable realities. Working to help bend that arc toward justice means that we need to acknowledge and eliminate racism; we must advocate for the poor, the immigrant, and the ignored; we need to protect human dignity; and we need to recognize that every person has a fundamental right to life and decency. We must stand with those who seek well-being and justice for all.

But what is justice? When we call for justice, on the streets, in our homes, schools, and workplaces, or from the pulpit, what do we mean? As Catholics, we have a rich history of social justice teachings that can help answer that question. The bishops of the United States have articulated 7 themes of Catholic Social Justice teaching (https://bit.ly/2A8ysEC). They are:

- Life and Dignity of the Human Person
 Human life is sacred and the dignity of the human person is the foundation of a moral vision for society
- Call to Family, Community, and Participation
 How we organize our society in economics and politics, in law and policy directly affects human dignity and the capacity of individuals to grow in community (continued on page 4)

Rights and Responsibilities

Every person has a fundamental right to life and a right to those things required for human decency, and corresponding to these rights are duties and responsibilities--to one another, to our families, and to the larger society.

Option for the Poor and Vulnerable

How do our most vulnerable members fare in our society? Our tradition instructs us to put the needs of the poor and vulnerable first.

• The Dignity of Work and the Rights of Workers

Work is more than a way to make a living; it is a form of continuing participation in God's creation. If the dignity of work is to be maintained, the rights of workers must be respected.

Solidarity

We are one human family whatever our national, racial, ethnic, economic, and ideological differences. At the core of the virtue of solidarity is the pursuit of justice and peace.

Care for God's Creation

We show our respect for the Creator by our stewardship of creation. Care for the earth is a requirement of our faith.

I encourage you to browse the bishop's site and the social justice documents. They provide some great background about our Catholic teachings and the challenges they entail. But they don't answer the concrete question of the moment: What can I do?

I wish I had the answer. I do know that personally, we are all called to introspection and conversion—to look inside and truly evaluate how we respect the rights, dignity, equality, and sanctity of racially different individuals and groups. Acknowledging our interior motives, biases, and privileges is the spark that can bring about a change of heart. Systemically, we must denounce the evil of both overt and covert racism. We must, like a gentle prophet, guide our friends and families, calling out racism and injustice. And throughout our society, we must be willing to work for change - to put our sweat equity into groups and organizations that reflect our social justice principles. We need to add our voices to the outcry for justice, our prayers to the need for peace, and our hands to the effort to recast our society into one of hope.

None of this is easy. Our history is littered with false starts and abandoned movements. But we cannot let this moment pass us by. We must walk together and make a difference.

Together, we must work to bend the arc toward justice.

-Deacon Mark

Learn at Home, for Individuals & Families

Service and Sacrifice

Two major holidays mark the beginning and middle of summer: Memorial Day and Independence Day. While these days might be spent picnicking with family or watching fireworks over the lake, they are meant to be reminders of the service and sacrifice offered on the behalf of our nation. We take time away from our usual schedule but to honor and celebrate those who laid down their lives for others.

In the Catholic church, we celebrate feast days to commemorate saints, martyrs, and special events in the life of the church. These important days are listed in the calendar of the church, and they are ordered by degree of importance. They fall into three categories: solemnities, feasts, and memorials.

When celebrating a solemnity, the church begins with either Vespers (evening prayer) or sometimes a vigil mass. The Gloria and Creed are recited at the mass. For example: Sundays and Holy Days are considered solemnities. The second highest rank is feast days. They do not have an evening celebration (with the exception of our Lord's feast days), and only the Gloria is recited. Finally, memorials are important days to celebrate a saint or group of saints.

Consider taking some time to celebrate and honor these special saints on their special days:

June 3 - Memorial of Saint Charles Lwanga and Companions (the patron saint of our sister parish in Uganda!)

June 29 - Solemnity of Saints Peter and Paul

July 1 - Memorial of Saint Junipero Serra

July 6 - Memorial for Saint Maria Goretti
